Indiana National Guard adjutant general promoted

INDIANAPOLIS – Indiana's Adjutant General, Brig. Gen. Courtney P. Carr, was promoted to major general by Gov. Mike Pence, retired Maj. Gen. R. Martin Umbarger and Carr's sister, Kellene Chapman, in a ceremony at the statehouse, Monday.

Carr, who will lead the more than 14,000 Hoosier Guardsmen, civilian employees and volunteers, took the reins of the Indiana National Guard from Umbarger during a ceremony in Indianapolis Saturday.

Carr, a Columbus, Indiana resident, is the 58th Indiana National Guard adjutant general, and Pence is the Indiana National Guard commander in chief.

"Your willingness to step forward, and follow who you describe as your mentor and someone you admire means a great deal to me personally as governor," said Pence to Carr and his family and friends during the brief ceremony.

Carr, who came back to the Hoosier State after several assignments in Washington, most recently was the U.S. Army's readiness and mobilization deputy director of operations. He commissioned in the Army in May 1983 from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y. Carr has led many units in the Indiana National Guard since 1991 including the 76th Infantry Brigade Combat Team and 81st Troop Command. In 2008, he deployed and led the 76th IBCT in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom. It was the largest deployment of Hoosier Guardsmen, 4,500 troops, since World War II.

The Indiana National Guard has units in 51 of Indiana's 92 counties, covering the state from Gary to Madison and from Evansville to Angola.

Indiana National Guard changes leaders

INDIANAPOLIS – Hoosier National Guardsmen and dignitaries from across Indiana and the nation said farewell to Maj. Gen. R. Martin Umbarger and welcomed Brig. Gen. Courtney P. Carr during a command change ceremony on the steps of the Indiana War Memorial Saturday.

Carr, a Columbus, Indiana resident, takes the reins as Indiana's adjutant general from Umbarger, who has led more than 14,000 citizen-soldiers and airmen, civilian employees and volunteers statewide since 2004.

Indiana Gov. Mike Pence, who is the Indiana National Guard commander in chief and reviewing officer during the ceremony, praised the generals for their leadership and making Indiana a strong National Guard state.

"It is because of the patriotism of the men and women in Indiana, and the leadership of the National Guard in our state," said Pence. "I say with great confidence, Brig. Gen. Carr is the right man to take our Guard higher still."

Carr, who came back to the Hoosier State after several assignments in Washington, most recently was the U.S. Army's readiness and mobilization deputy director of operations. He commissioned in the Army in May 1983 from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y. Carr has led many units in the Indiana National Guard since 1991 including the 76th Infantry Brigade Combat Team and 81st Troop Command. In 2008, he deployed and led the 76th IBCT in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom. It was the largest deployment of Hoosier Guardsmen, 4,500 troops, since World War II.

Carr during his speech thanked Pence and recognized Umbarger for his contributions.

"Governor, thank you for the great honor to join your team and to lead the soldiers and airmen of the Indiana National Guard. Sir, your Guard is recognized as a top performing team, and there's no question General Umbarger has had a huge impact. His leadership will leave a long-lasting legacy. It's an honor and very humbling to follow my mentor," said Carr.

Carr also said he's ready to lead the Indiana National Guard in its dual mission to state and nation.

"I'm excited to lead this great organization, and I'm confident we are ready to answer your call to support our fellow Hoosiers, and to answer our nation's call when needed," said Carr. "It's truly a great honor, and governor I'm ready to get to work."

Umbarger leaves military service and the Indiana National Guard after more than 45 years of faithful service. He led Hoosier Guardsmen during a challenging and difficult period during the nation's war on terrorism. Approximately 19,000 Indiana National Guard soldiers and airmen deployed during Umbarger's tenure as adjutant general. Additionally more than 4,500 Hoosier National Guard troops were activated for state, active duty to respond to natural disasters during his 11-year command Umbarger thanked his fellow service members during his speech, and their dedication to selfless service.

"You are the few serving for the benefit of the many of this nation. I just want to say to you and your families, thank you for your sacrifice," said Umbarger. "I want to thank you for raising your hand and leaving your homes and going off to fight for freedom. I'm very proud of each and every one of you."

DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS

Do you know the services offered by the Department of Veterans Affairs? Here is a way to find out:

The mission of the Department of Veterans Affairs is to assist and provide the best possible services to Veterans in the areas of claims assistance, employment services, education, family assistance, and care that will extensively improve the quality of life for all Indiana Veterans and their families.

The Veterans Service Center for Employment will help all veterans, active duty members, and family members to find employment and education. We will help educate veterans and service members about the different GI bills and the Remission of Fees for Children of Disabled Veterans that Indiana offers. With the benefits that our veterans and service members earned we can help find the career positions that are needed and "place" into employment.

Here at the Indiana Department of Veterans Affairs Office we can answer your questions.

If you would like help finding employment please give us a call at 1-317-232-3910 or 1-844-480-0009 and ask for Dee Pugh.

DEDICATION AND RIBBON CUTTING AT JOINT FORCE HEADQUARTERS AT STOUT FIELD

Staff Report Story

INDIANAPOLIS – Gov. Mike Pence and Maj. Gen. R. Martin Umbarger welcomed soldiers and airman back to the newly expanded and renovated Joint Force Headquarters of the Indiana National Guard during a ribbon-cutting ceremony today.

“When the winds blow, when the rain comes down, when the flood waters rise, it is the Indiana National Guard that’s there to come alongside our citizens, and they have done so with extraordinary professionalism and selflessness. This new Joint Force Headquarters will make it more possible to them to be more prepared to defend our nation and support our people in times of crisis,” said Pence during the ceremony.

The federally-funded expansion and renovation of the Indiana National Guard’s Joint Force Headquarters enables the consolidation of more than 900 civilian and military personnel.

Other improvements to adjacent structures will accommodate 500 part-time drilling personnel, and routinely support the administrative and logistics requirements of 20 full-time personnel associated with four Indiana National Guard units.

The project enabled the Indiana National Guard to discontinue leases at Fort Benjamin Harrison and the Morris Street facility totaling $457,000 annually.

The project added 80,000 square feet to building 1, and renovated 76,000 square feet of existing space in buildings 1, 3 and 9 at a cost of approximately $32 million, and included utility upgrades, site development and furnishings.

122ND FIGHTER WING RETURNS TO THE FORT

Story by Master Sgt. Darin Hubble.

FORT WAYNE, Ind. - The 122nd Fighter Wing and over 1,000 family members and friends welcomed home more than 300 Indiana Air National Guard members from their six-month deployment in support of Operations Enduring Freedom and Inherent Resolve, April 22, 2015, at the Fort Wayne Guard Base.

Deployed Oct. 15, 2014, the unit was originally scheduled to support an operational exercise in the U.S. Central Command region, 386th Air Expeditionary Wing, Southwest Asia. The unit was instead sent to Bagram Air Base, Afghanistan, and then in late November 2014, transitioned to the 332nd Air Expeditionary Group, working closely with coalition partners. There, they were one of the first units of the Air National Guard to project airpower against the enemy, standing up operations to support Operation Inherent Resolve.

“When we came to our current base, our maintenance and operations folks had six tents each with no power and no communications,” said Lt. Col. Bill Leahy, 163rd Expeditionary Fighter Squadron commander. “Seven days later we were flying 24-hour combat operations in Iraq and Syria. Our guys have done an amazing job with very little. It shows the versatility and flexibility of the A-10 and the maintainers and operators who accomplish our mission.”

“This deployment has been a unique and outstanding moment in Blacksnake history,” said Col. Patrick R. Renwick, 122nd Fighter Wing Commander. “The 122nd has never before completed a deployment for such a length of time with so many members taking part at once. The fact that over 300 Blacksnakes were overseas meeting and exceeding mission expectations for over half a year is a testament to their experience, training and endurance as a wing. The 122nd has established itself the proven choice as a warfighter.”

The 122nd Fighter Wing is one of the first Air National Guard bases in history to take on a mission of this size and length relative to previous 122nd Fighter Wing deployments. In the past, it was rare for an entire Air Package, consisting of operations and maintenance personnel, to deploy overseas for any period of time close to six months.

“I don't know of a time in Blacksnake history we have taken this kind of aviation footprint forward,” said Renwick, “The A-10 ‘Warthog’ is uniquely suited for the Combatant Commander's needs, and the Blacksnakes are the right team to bring that capability to combat.”

The A-10 Thunderbolt II from the 163rd EFS performed more than 19 percent of all missions in this theater of operations expending nearly 50,000 rounds of ammunition and dropped approximately 500 bombs and maverick missiles in support of Operation Inherent Resolve.

“They're doing the nation's business, and they're doing it well,” said Renwick. “The mission was to deliver combat firepower decisively and they did that in fine fashion.”

The Airmen were deployed after extensive preparation, ranging from cultural awareness to weapons qualification to medical training, having taken part in exercises Red Flag, Alaska and Green Flag, Louisiana, as well as pre-deployment training. Members and their families were prepared by taking part in Yellow Ribbon training and other pre-deployment functions. They carried out the same job overseas that they had been training monthly for at the 122nd Fighter Wing as drill status guardsmen.

“The Airmen of the 122nd Fighter Wing are trained and ready to answer our nation's call to duty,” said Renwick. “The Air National Guard and the Blacksnakes are a proven choice in combat, I have no doubt we can accomplish any mission assigned!”

The wing members were deployed through some major 2014 holidays, many monumental family moments and a few cases, the birth of their children. Members were in contact with their loved ones through social media, email and the occasional Skype or FaceTime. Sacrifice seems to be a constant for the men and women of the U.S. military, the Air Force, the Air National Guard and the 122nd Fighter Wing. The 122nd Fighter Wing has had over 2000 service member's volunteer for deployments around the world since 9-11, to locations including Iraq, Afghanistan, Spain and Japan, within the United States among other locations.

While deployed to be a deputy commander, Col. Michael Stohler, the 122nd's, Operations Group Commander, assumed command of the 332nd Air Expeditionary Group, Nov. 16, 2014. The 332nd AEG is derived from the historical WWII, 332nd Fighter Group - the famed Tuskegee Airmen.

The 332nd has been activated twice in Southwest Asia, since 1998 as part of Operation Southern Watch and now Operation Inherent Resolve. The provisional unit was last activated as the 332nd Air Expeditionary Wing at Balad Air Base, Iraq, and was inactivated on May 8, 2012.

"As Airmen of the 332nd, through our hard work and dedication, we will carry forward the honor (the Red Tails) deserve by remembering their sacrifices and successes," said Stohler.

The unit returned to "the Fort" April 22, 2015 with the A-10C Warthog's returning the next day. Much of the unit's tons of cargo and equipment returned with them. All 12 aircraft that left Fort Wayne in October returned to be immediately inspected by the 122FW Maintenance Support Group, in order to return the jets to full mission capability.

"My goal from the start has been to ensure that 100 percent of our Airmen return from their mission overseas," said Renwick. "I am humbled to serve and command such a respected wing and am incredibly proud of these returning airmen."

The adjutant general of the state of Indiana, Maj. Gen. R. Martin Umbarger, when greeting the group, said, "I couldn't be prouder of the Airman and their families of the 122nd and the sacrifices that they have made for the nation and the state of Indiana."

Umbarger also read a letter from the governor of Indiana, Mike Pence, recognizing that sacrifice.

One last mission with the Hog

Story by Tech. Sgt. Kurt Briner

FORT WAYNE, Ind. - Acquiring 5,935 flight hours on a single type of aircraft is no small feat for a pilot. Patience, practice, and most importantly passion are all demanded to reach milestones that set military aviators apart from their peers. For Lt. Col. Brady 'Bozz' Glick, an A-10C pilot assigned to the 163rd Fighter Squadron, Fort Wayne, Indiana, his final flight in the beloved Warthog was the capstone to a record-setting career.

Glick's total flight hours bestow upon him the record for most A-10 hours flown in history of the aircraft. His career started at the U.S. Air Force Academy, and after graduation he started down the path of becoming a fighter pilot. He completed his first A-10 flight in January 1989, and he has been racking up the hours ever since. After seven years on active duty, he transferred to the Michigan Air National Guard at Battle Creek, Michigan. After several years there, he transitioned to the U.S. Air Force Reserves at Barksdale Air Force Base, Louisiana. When that unit closed, he headed north and joined the Indiana Air National Guard, completing his service to all three U.S. Air Force components.

Getting to this level of experience doesn't come without challenges. "It's a long road, becoming a fighter pilot," said Glick. "And just as tough staying with it. But eras end, and I'm excited about the future generation coming up."

Reflecting on his career, Glick described the personal attributes of his job that mattered most to him. "Being in the squadron, with the guys, that will be the hardest thing to walk away from," said Glick. "The camaraderie here is tangible ... it's just a great place to make a career."

As an instructor pilot, Glick was able to mentor up-and-coming pilots and try and pass on wisdom he had learned through challenges in the past. "I love teaching," he said. "Helping a student avoid a mistake I made in the past is a great feeling."

Lt. Col. William Leahy, 163rd Fighter Squadron

commander, believes that Glick is the type of fighter pilot others strive to be. “Bozz had the good fortune of being so highly respected, he quickly became an informal leader and mentor,” said Leahy. “He simply cares about being the very best he can be, and he works hard to bring people around him up as well.”

In the end, just being a pilot might be the most rewarding thing. “It’s hard to find something as gratifying as flying the A-10,” said Glick. “I am really fortunate to have spent my time doing something I truly enjoyed.”

After engine shutdown, hugs from family and a ceremonial spraying from the base fire department, Glick was able to walk off the flight line with a smile knowing that beyond the achievements, every hour in the cockpit was time he cherished, spent doing something he loved.

Cyclone Division completes Vibrant Response exercise

By Staff Sgt. Lorne Neff, 38th Infantry Division Public Affairs

More than 200 38th Infantry Division citizen-soldiers wrapped up their training in the six-day Vibrant Response exercise at Camp Atterbury, Tuesday.

The Division Commander, Maj. Gen. David C. Wood, said the Cyclone Division soldiers were training in their ability to command and control in the event of a major disaster in the United States.

In this year’s Vibrant Response exercise, the disaster was a nuclear detonation in a major city.

“We will command a multicomponent force which will consist of active-duty soldiers, United States Army reserve soldiers, Army National Guard soldiers, all working together as one team to be effective to responding to this disaster,” said Wood.

The training was for a real-world mission – to respond to an actual radiological, biological, or chemical attack – which will begin in June.

“We have the mission for one year to be prepared to move out within 96 hours and respond in a supporting role to local and state officials and assisting them in saving lives and minimizing suffering,” said Wood.

The 38th soldiers spent several days at the Joint Simulation Training Exercise Center at the southern Indiana post, which is about 10 miles north of Columbus, Indiana.

“It’s going very well,” said Maj. Andrew Weaver, 38th Infantry Division chief of operations. “Any time you have a training event, you have clear expectations and goals and at this point we have met our goals.”

During the exercise, the Cyclone Division command staff coordinated missions for more than 2,000 personnel.

“It’s the most important mission we can do, we just hope we are never called to do it,” said Weaver. “I served in Katrina and that small window was one of the most rewarding times of my life because we are truly helping Americans.”

During the disaster-response mission, the division will be known as Task Force 38, and will be accompanied by units from other states including Michigan, Kentucky, Alabama, Florida, Texas and South Carolina.

“I went out and visited the commands, and I know the soldiers are all fired up about what they learned,” said Command Sgt. Maj. James Martin, the 38th ID’s senior-enlisted advisor. “I know they are ready if this unfortunate mission were to come up. We are ready to go.”

North Barracks Complex dedicated to former Governor Mitch Daniels

Staff Report Story

EDINBURGH, Ind. – Maj. Gen. R. Martin Umbarger, the Adjutant General of the Indiana National Guard, hosted a dedication ceremony today in honor of former Governor Mitch Daniels. Camp Atterbury dedicated its new barracks complex to Daniels, as he was a major part of the land acquisition exchange.

Umbarger said it was important for the thousands of civilian and military personnel training at Atterbury-Muscatatuk to know about the leadership Daniel's provided in making the development possible.

"Special forces, civilian law enforcement and first responders, all branches of our military, as well as militaries of other countries, train here regularly, they have some of the best possible resources this country can provide," said Umbarger. "If not for the support and leadership of Mitch Daniels, they just would not have this."

Back in October 2010, Daniels, along with the Indiana National Guard, the Indiana Department of Natural Resource and the Indiana Department of Corrections, signed an agreement to release nearly 1,200 acres of DNR land north of Camp

Atterbury in exchange for approximately 2,000 acres at Putnamville Correctional Facility. The exchange provided the opportunity to revitalize portions of the original cantonment area.

"Of my years in elected office I thought the highest honor and the highest duty was to the Indiana National Guard," said Daniels. "None is more critical or deserving of our support than the mission both domestic and nationally, that the Guard shoulders for us."

The now president of Purdue University, Daniels told the crowd about Umbarger's meetings with him as the Camp Atterbury - Muscatatuck initiative unfolded, and how the Indiana National Guard's vision matched very closely the reality of the facilities today.

"The word vision is tossed around a little too much, but general, you had one, and it was just a great treat for many of us to help you make it real."

Daniels said the economic impact in southeast Indiana has been appreciated, but Hoosiers understood that was only secondary to the real and significant purpose behind the development.

"First and foremost, Indiana is for what will serve the national security interests of the United States, said Daniels. "We will need men and women, like each of you, and all those who have come through here, and the ones that will for generations to come. You deliver to those brave men and women the kind of training, the kind of service, the kind of respect they deserve. I just want to express my heartfelt thanks."

CPT (Ret) Charles David Emhardt

CPT (R)Charles David Emhardt 83, passed away peacefully at his home with family on January 14, 2015. David was the son of Dr. John William Augustus Emhardt and Martha MacDougall Emhardt. He was born on February 13, 1931, and lived in Indianapolis almost his entire life. He attended IPS Schools 84 and 31 and graduated from Culver Military Academy in 1948. He received a B.S. in Engineering Mechanics from Purdue University in 1952, and graduated from Harvard Law School in 1955.

He met the love of his life, Lucy Ann DeVaney, of Indianapolis, in the spring of 1954 when she was a senior at Wellesley College. She survives him. David and Ann were married on November 12, 1954, in the Harvard Memorial Chapel, and celebrated their 60th Anniversary just months ago. They were the proud parents of five children.

David moved back to Indianapolis after graduating from law school and started work as a patent lawyer with Lockwood Woodard Smith & Weikart. After he became partner, the firm changed its name to Woodard Weikart Emhardt & Naughton, and now is known as Woodard Emhardt Moriarty McNett & Henry LLP. David helped to grow the firm to more than 30 patent attorneys. He worked with Indiana companies, large and small, and individuals to protect their inventions and other intellectual property for more than 50 years, before retiring in 2011 at age 80. On his 75th birthday, Governor Daniels awarded him a Sagamore of the Wabash, which he displayed in his den for the rest of his life.

David served his community in many different ways. He was a lifelong member of First Meridian Heights Presbyterian Church and served as an elder there for many years. He was a Mason for over 50 years and a member of the Scottish Rite and Murat Shrine. He was a Republican precinct committeemen and hosted elections in the garage of his home. He served as president of the Jordan YMCA and helped with its expansions in the 60s and early 70s. He was a member of the Downtown Optimist Club and served as its president. He joined the Lawyers Club of Indianapolis and served as its president. David was always easy going and approachable and loved by all those he came across.

David also served his country. He was a member of the ROTC at Purdue University, and served in the United States Army six months active duty and for 8 years in the Judge Advocate General's office of the Indiana National Guard.

David lived an active life for as long as his health allowed. He played handball. He picked up tennis at North Central High School in the early 60s and played on a USTA League National Champion team. He windsurfed at Eagle Creek and in Aruba and was a regional seniors champion. He went diving in Bonaire. He rowed crew with Culver alumnae. He "shot the gap" in North Carolina on his BMW motorcycle at age 70. He took his family on ski vacations and regularly skied the entire day, even at age 75. He still slalom water skied at age 70. He exercised at the Indianapolis Athletic Club on his lunch hours until it closed down. He sang barbershop quartet. In 2009, he was diagnosed with Parkinson's Disease and stayed in shape for as long as he could with workouts at Rock Steady Boxing. He was affectionately known by his family as "Super Dave."

David was a true family man and rabid Purdue sports fan. He loved spending time with his wife and children and grandchildren. He took his clan on winter and summer vacations regularly, including a jaunt to the Rose Bowl in 2001 to watch Drew Brees and Seth Morales. His love for his family, sage advice, and dry humor will long be remembered.
